BAD SPIRITS GOT HER.

Medium Diss Debar's Friends Explain Her Deceit.

O'Delia Sticks to the Fable About Lola Montez.

Her Story, However, Differs from What She Said in the Tombs-The Tombs Testimony She Admits Was Palse, Because She find Not Given It Under Onth-George Francis Train Brings More Bon

In anticipation of a grand pyrotechnic exhibition there was a gathering of more than a court-room full to hear the cross-examination of Mme. Diss Debar in Judge Gildersleeve's part of the Court of General Sessions to-day The Spiritualists were out in force, and score of ladies were present.

Citizen George Francis Train, with a box of bouquets for the Judge and the reporters was there, and anticipation was on tiptoe. An EVENING WORLD reporter asked one of the faithful, "How can you stand by madame when her fraud has been so clearly demonstrated?" To which this answer was

Those not conversant with Spiritualistic philosophy make a great mistake. We know -have known for a long time-that this woman was deceitful. But she is in the control of bad spirits. The 'diakkas' are to blame for her deceits. She cannot control their action, and is a medium against her own

Citizen Train sent a bouquet to the Assistant District-Attorney, and when he was told that his name was Davis he exclaimed: "Good gracious! Any relation to Judge Noah Davis? He's the man who locked me Noah Davis? He's the man who locked me up?"

A nosegay to madame was accompanied by a card inscribed: "Psycho regards to Citoyenne Diss Debar."

Madame graciously smiled and bowed her acknowledgments, kissing the bouquet and waving it dramatically at the sage.

The fireworks began at 11.15 o'clock, Vernon H. Davis, the cool, calm, firm, always gentlemanly young prosecutor, orbss-examining the oracular Princess, whose resemblance to George and Alice Salomon is strikingly brought out in her role as witness.

A spectator said; "Alice has more intellect than George and Ann O'Delia together. Ann O'Delia has more education and worldly shrewdness than the other two, and George is the natural plant. Their tongues, tempers and general features are very much alike,"

Mr. Davis asked Mistress Oracle where were the letters written by Artist Bierstadt.

"It would be impossible for me to say," she replied. "While I was yet a prisoner in the Tombs Mr. Marsh sent me a request to remove my effects from his house. This involved the paper on the wall and the paint itself.

"Mr. Titus Merrit moved such things as

"Mr. Titus Merrit moved such things as Mr. Marsh would permit."

"Did you not point to that black bag when those letters were mentioned the other day and say to Mr. Townsend 'they are all in there."

"No, sir, never."

As a matter of fact, madame did do and say the that the time Mr. Townsend 'they time Mr. Townsend 'they are all in the time Mr. Townsend 'they are all

As a matter of fact, madame did do and say just that, but at the time Mr. Townsend just that, but at the time Mr. Townsend silenced her.

Madame said she would not produce those letters, for reasons of her own—the best of reasons—but would not tell those reasons.

A question arose which madame didn't want to answer and she argued the legal point. Judge Gildersleeve counselled her to let her lawyer look after hor rights.

Whereupon madame pointed her fan at Senstor Boyd and in an austere tone jerked out, "Will you attend to your business, sir?" Her testimony this morning differing from that at the Tombs, madame explained that she was not under oath at the Tombs Court, and didsnot always make the same statement under oath that she did when not under oath. There was a breadth, fullness, unctuousness, in madame's enunciation familiar to those who have heard elecutionists and cheap actors. She said: 'I was born, I have been told, in Florence, Italy. Me mother was Lola Montez."

Marie Wainwright, in a black beaded gown and an olive-green bonnet, was among the spectators. Chauncey Kerr and the actress compared notes of the trial on a settee in one compared notes of the trial on a settle in one corner of the room.

It was brought out that madame had dodged the question, when she testified in the police court, that she never received any mency from Marsh. She admitted to-day police court, that she never received any mesney from Marsh. She admitted to-day that Marsh gave her several checks.

Madame, more astute than her 'General,' would not admit that she and she were ever married. She knew that his merriage to her would be bigamous. But she insisted that in the highest sense they were man and wife, and that she was morally perfect as wife, mother, woman and Christian.

Madame was as varying as the weather prophet. She was by times smiling and affable; austere and frowning; she rolled her eyes towards heaven in a rhapsody and again clinched her fat fists and grated her teeth, hissing out anathemetical replies at her tormentor.

Her favorite spirits included Cicero, Homer, Epaminondas, Perioles, Socrates, Archimedes, Pythagoras, Plato and Aristotle—"all gentlemen of eminence."

By Mr. Davis—They are all Greeks but one. Do they speak Greek to you? A. No, air. They speak in English. They came to me in my romes cell and counselled me to return the property of Mr. Marsh to him.

Q. Did they all talk together? A. No, air. Socrates, who hade money, advised it and all the other seatlemen seconded the motion. They consulted together and then said, "Do it." They were there but an instant of time, and I got gaper and ink and wrote the letter to Mr. Marsh. I would not dare to disobey them.

Madame does not believe in bad spirits. She says, "The evil spirits are here on

She says: "The evil spirits are here on earth."

When asked if she could restore old pictures, works of human art, by means of her spirit power, madame waxed very indignant, She said: "Not at all! It would be a prosti-of the lotter written to George Salomon by her, asking for a loan and saying she needed the money to tide her over till she could compel her mahand to settle with her, madance said it was all manufactured. She had no kushend and expected no sottlement. She said it with a refreshing confidence in herself and indifference to its effect on the jury or her own chances for salvation as a liar.

"It would take hours to make you understand that letter, Mr. Davis, and I don't propose to do it."

The Princess said that she got her impetuous temperament from her Irish and German extraction—not from "Kaintucky" blood.

Madame said the dog "Mack" referred to in one of her letters was her only friend in the Salomon family.

Madame was asked regarding the testimony of Mrs. Vance, Mrs. Sandsbury, George C.

T. Salomon, Reporter Babcock, Mr. Randolph, Mr. Bierstadt, Mr. McCormick and the rest of the long line of witnesses who had testified to her crookedness and formed the chain of convincing evidence of her guilt, and she said of each in turn, "Utterly false!"

"Rank perjury!" "Not a word of truth!"

"He's a reporter, and excusable." "All perjury."

The trial of John R. Dunn upon the charge of grand larceny was continued before Judge Barrett and a jury in the Court of Oyer and Terminer at 11 o'clock this foremoon.

Dunn is a lawyer by profession and was indicted jointly with Charles S. Scott, formerly paping teller of the Bank of the Manhattan

He's a reporter, and excusable." "All perjury."

She pronounced the family record written in the old, dog-eared, discolored, moth-eaten salomon family Bible a forgery, and with this magnificent culmination of his cross-examination Mr. Davis surrendered the fair O'Delia to Senator Boyd.

Judge Gildersleeve asked: "You have produced as a medium seventy-five paintings for Mr. Marsh. Did it ever occur to you that some slight manifestation of this Spiritualistic power in the presence of the jury would almost surely convince them of your innocences?"

Madame replied: "Yes, Your Honor. But I cannot control the spirits. I know not how my power comes, nor when. Should I at any time feel the slightest latent power, I should immediately make my utmost endeavors to manifest it.

It was the stereotyped rhetorical style of the cheap lecturer. Madame's ordeal was passed and she was permitted to leave the stand.

NOT BRIDGES, BUT TUNNELS.

The Park Board Decides There Shall Be No More Bridges Over the Harlem.

There will be no more bridges, either draw or high span, built across the Harlem River. That point was definitely settled this morn-or high span, built across the Harlem River. That point was definitely settled this morning by the Park Board in adopting the report of the committee of engineers appointed some time ago to investigate the subject.

The committee consisted of Edgar B. Van Winkle, Thomas O. Clarke, George W. McNulty and Gen. John Newton. It was requested to report as to the relative merits and advantages of draw bridges, high-span bridges or tunnels as a means of communication across the Harlem, and particularly as to the best substitute for the present McComb's Dam Bridge. The report strongly favored tunnels. The committee estimated that the total cost of a tunnel at Seventh avenue would not exceed $2,000,000.

Park Commissioners Robb and Towle wanted the report adopted. They said that they had given much attention to the subject, and fully agreed with the report of the engineers. The report was adopted.

Landscape Architect Dwight Olmstead reported that the work on Morningside Park was being badly done. The Board informed him that this fact had already been discovered and a new foruman put in charge.

The Commissioners thanked Mr. Olmstead, however, and saked him to keep an eye on the work and let them know if he saw anything wrong. This he promised to do.

Managerie Director Conklin reported that there would be a sale of eighty-one Southdown sheep and lambs, June 26, at Central Park.

paping teller of the Bank of the Manhattan Company, who stole $150,000 from the bank June 1, 1885, and skipped to Canada. In Sepember of that year he went to England, where he met Dunn.

Scott recently made a confession to Consul-General Waller, in England, in which he stated that he speculated with the bank's money previous to leaving New York and ost $10,000. He could not replace it, and vent to Dunn, a cousin of his wife, for advice.

He says Dunn told him to take all the noncy he could get his hands on and go to Canada. After some hesitation and a great leal of persuasion from Dunn, Scott took $150,000 from the bank and gave $140,000 to Dunn for safekeeping. He also says he has not seen may of the money since.

Scott testified that he gave $10,000 of the stolen money to Mrs. A. L. Roberts. He got the money out of his hands so that he could not be extradited for taking stolen money, into the money out of his hands so that he could not be extradited for taking stolen money, into Canada.

Dunn was scated at the end of a table occupied by his counsel, Charles Brooke and Silas M. Stillwell. He appeared somewhat embarrassed and nervous, and seldom took his eyes from a cony of a newspaper which he held in his hand, except when some very important testimony was elicited.

Charles S. Scott was recalled and identified it as a letter addressed to him previous to the letter of Jan. 25. 1887, by John R. Dunn.

The letter was read by Assistant District. Attorney Parker. It stated that the writer was in terrible distress of mind and that he had speculated with the money left with him with the expectation that he would make money enough to settle Scott's trouble with the bank, and had lost all.

He wrote that he felt like blowing his brains out and feared that he would become insane. The witness said that he sent the letter to his wife.

Mr. Brooke then commenced cross-examining the witness, who said that he entered into the employ of the bank when nineteen years old, at a salary of $300, and received presents which swelled it to $700 or $800. He then testified to his advancement from one position to another until he became paying teller at a salary of $3,000 and received a bonus in addition.

His salary was subsequently advanced to $4,000, with no bonus. When he left New York he was living at 3 East Forty seventh at received a stated salary of $1,000 or $2,000 from his father's estate when twenty-one years old.

In a purchase of Louisville and Nashville stock of 1884, bought on a margin, witness paid $500, which he took from the bank, and acknowledged that he pilfered it. He made a false ticket that night to make it appear that the cash balanced. That was the first time he stole money from the bank.

He did it afterwards several times. The largest sum he took previous to his last theft was $2,000. The money was stolen each time during banking hours. When he took money from the vault ticket.

His thefts covered a period of eighteen months. A committee of directors made examinations of the bank's affairs.

President Hayes and Vice-President Kennedy also made examinations. The witness knew the examinations were coming and covered up the deficiencies. He directed checks charged twice to mislead the examiners. He did this three or four times.

He knew that the entries were false. To straighten the accounts he would not credit other checks of like amount when they came in. Witness and cashier had access to the vault. Chicago Convention as an original Depew boomer.

The case of Sergt. Edward G. O'Brien was called, and an army of witnesses appeared. O'Brien was accused by Inspector Williams with making a false report of the rescue of Mrs. Ann Doolau from a burning building in Madison street.

Inspector Williams testified that on instructions from Supt. Murray he made an investigation, examining the witnesses to the fire, and found that at no time was the life of Sergt. O'Brien or any of the immates of the burning building at 256 Madison street, in peril. The report of O'Brien to the Superintendent was read in which he reiterated the statement that he rescued Mrs. Doolan, who was in great peril, and in doing so he burned his hands. Mrs. Doolan swore that there was no fire, water or smoke in her room at any time.

Eraph Finkelstein, a Russian tenant, said no fire, water or smoke in her room at any time.

Frank Finkelstein, a Russian tenant, said he awoke all the tenants, and there was fire and smoke in the hallway. He had no trouble in getting to the street by the stairway, on which there was no fire.

Mrs. Lavele, the housekeeper, resided on the second floor, and swore that the smoke reached that floor. Three rooms were burned, but only two feet of casing was burned in the hallway. There were twenty families and fully one hundred people in the house at the time of the fire.

Sergt. O'Brien testified that he saw a fire and ran to the building. He hastened upstairs and found Mrs. Doolan trying to enter the burning room to get an insurance book and aided by Barry and Power he carried her downstairs and burned his finger in taking her out the building.

He made the report of the rescue, not to ceive an honorable mention, but because he was ordered to do so by Capt. Garland.

Roundsman Barry said when he and Officer Powell appeared, Mrs. Doolan was clinging to the baluster and Sergt. O'Brien ordered them to take her down stairs at once and they did so. The woman was ten feet from the fire, and there was no flame in the hallway.

In reply to a question by Commissioner French O'Brien said that he was very much excited when he made the statement at the station-house. He really believed the woman would have been burned to death if he had not rescued her, but he could not say that anything was burned where he found her. The case was closed.

Will This Be a Quietus to the "Blaine or Bust" Boom?

PITTSBURG, June 18.—The Leader says: "B. Jones, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, left for Chicago last night to establish his headquarters at the Grand Pacific Hotel. He was weighted down with a great secret and absolutely refused to be nterviewed prior to his departure.

"In his possession was a letter but just received from James G. Blaine, which is to be ead upon the assembling of the National Convention next Tuesday.

"It states in terms that cannot be mistaken Mr. Blaine's position in regard to the Presidency, and settles for good and all the question of his candidacy. In neither of his previous epistles from Florence and Paris did Mr. Blaine state positively that he would not sceept the nomination if tendered him.

John Sherman, of Ohio, is his preference, and advises the convention to place him at the head of the Republican national ticket. "Continuing, Mr. Blaine gives quite a lengthy dissertation on the tariff, predicting in glowing terms a glorious victory for the Republican party in November. He contrasts the campaigns of 1884 and 1888, and shows how this year all the odds are in favor of the Republicans.

The Leader further avers on what it claims to be excellent authority, that "Senstor Sherman and Mr. Blaine have understood each other on the question of the Pres idency for several months, and that even before the Maine man's parture for Europe an arrangement been entered into between the two that, in case of the elevation of Sherman to the White House, Blame is to be his Secretary of June 13.—To-day an Evenino World reporter met Jesse Gove, "the original Biaine man" from Massachusetts. in the City Hall. He was getting ready to depart with the Republican delegation for Chicago to-morrow evening. "Who is going to be nominated, Alderman?" asked the reporter. "Blaine, sure," was the reply.

POETLAND, Me., June 13.—The first mention of James G. Blaine's name in the Republican Convention here yesterday by Judge Wisewell, the Chairman, caused the wildest excitement among the delegates.

Hats were thrown high in air and the voice of the speaker was drowned in the enthusi-astic shouts of the admirers of the Plumed Knight.

Biaine's hand appeared in the selection of the Republican candidate for Governor.

Joe Manley has worked for months to secure the nomination of Bufleigh, and his victory yesterday pressges an overwhelming Blaine sontiment in the Maine delegation to the Chicago Convention.

Manley's action in booming Burleigh is not without significance.

The feeling here this morning among the Republicans is enthusiastic for the selection of their favorite son as the standard-bearer of the Republicans, and they are of the opinion that notwithstanding his repeated declinations he will accept the nomination.

Maine will look out that it is tendered him, if Joe Manley has anything to say in the Convention.

EMBEZZLEMENT AND SUICIDE.

Defaulting Collector, in Four of Exponers Blows Out His Brains. Edward Bernhardt, forty years of age, 497 Perry street, Newark, was found last evening, with his back resting against a tree, on the old Bloomfield road, and a bullet through his braiu. By his side was a 32-calibre revolver, with which he had taken his own life. Bernhardt was employed as a collector for F. and M. Schaefer, the brewers, of Fifty-first street and Fourth avonue, New York, and late last night the fact was developed that he had embezzled $4,000 of the firm's money. It was probably fear of exposure that led him to suicide. A bunch of daisies was found in his lap, with this letter:

MY DEAR WIVE: Despair drives use to death.
